

Seventh Polio Death of Cases

Washington, June 29 — (AP) — The seventh polio victim of the year died today as the mounting epidemic taxed the capacity of the state's only polio isolation wards at the University hospital here.

The "seventh" infantile paralysis victim was Lloyd Doshier, five, Yellowville, Marion county, who died at the University hospital. The son of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Doshier was rushed here yesterday and placed in a respirator.

Meanwhile, the total number of cases this year rose to 121 and two suspected polio patients are undergoing diagnosis here. Three other new cases received today definitely diagnosed as polio.

As the influx of new cases overtaxed the University hospital isolation facilities, Charles Massey, Jr., state director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and representatives of Little Rock hospitals met this morning in an attempt to arrange new isolation ward space.

W. Newman, University hospital business manager, said this morning that "we have been forced to place incoming polio patients in the halls; we have just about reached our capacity."

For a short time this morning, incoming polio cases were separated from regular admissions only by screens.

WE CAN HAVE STREET MARKERS

The Hope Lions Club is to be congratulated on their latest project — that of placing permanent street markers throughout the City. This work will be financed through the sale of house numbers. They want to mark every street and number every house.

These men had enough faith in Hope to invest a large sum of money in this project. Let's don't disappoint them. Let's buy all the numbers we need and give them all the encouragement we can otherwise give in the accomplishment of this worthwhile project.

Mayor Lyle Brown

Man Who Claimed to Be 134 Years Old Succumbs

Jacksonville, Fla., June 28 — (UP) — Major James Edward Monroe claimed he was the son of President James Monroe. He never could prove it, but no one was ever able to prove he wasn't.

The small, bright-eyed older died yesterday at a nursing home here where he had been cared for since the cold shows of New York chased him from two years ago.

Before that, the major lived in a houseboat on the St. Johns river and dozens of small boys in the neighborhood crowded around him to hear tales of how he fought with the Turks against the Russians, or was it with the Russians against the Turks. It didn't matter because that was a long time ago. Monroe became a "major" in the war between the states, that is, he became a Confederate major.

He said he was born at Ashland, Va., July 4, 1815. That would be 134 years ago. Monday, this, too, never could be proved but the major had enough stories to tell to convince most of the skeptics.

He was the Franco-Russian war and the Mexican war. He dug diamonds in Kimberly, South Africa, and he was intimately familiar with the ports of the world and with the oceans leading to them.

He celebrated Independence Day by wearing his best clothes, morning coat with Confederate flag in the bouton hole and striped pants.

He would sit in a downtown park and tell anyone who would listen the myriad stories of his wanderings, how he sailed from this corner of the world to that corner, and stopped off for a war in between.

Nationalist Planes Bomb Shanghai

By The Associated Press

Nationalist Chinese planes bombed Communist-held Shanghai for more than an hour today. Their attacks seemed to be the north railway station and freight yards.

No casualty figures were announced by the Communists but the toll was expected to be heavy. Authorities combated off several city blocks while ambulances rolled away the injured.

Britain will face a showdown today at Paris in her economic relations with other Western European nations which will have an impact on the present British financial crisis.

The 19 nations which receive Marshall plan aid are meeting to discuss international trade and a method of financial settlement between them. The United States is urging the nations to stop barrier arrangements and enter into many-sided trade agreements. This would mean that nations would settle their accounts in gold and dollars.

Britain feels the time is not ripe for multilateral trade. Britain's economic chief, Sir Stafford Cripps, favors retaining the present system of bilateral trade. Under it, British economists believe they are better able to control dollar reserves.

'Operation Foil' Being Carried Out By British, Allies Aimed at Protecting All Attacks

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

More than 100 warships — British, French, Dutch and Belgian — are assembling in the English Channel, on England's west coast, for naval exercises.

These operations are purely defensive, aimed at aggression from any quarter. The international aspect of this fleet in peacetime maneuvers probably is unique.

Mentally British, American and Dutch warplanes are waging over Britain a mock war which is designated as "operation foil." Its purpose is to test John Bull's defenses against an attack with atom bombs — from any quarter. Here again the international aspect is unique.

This is Britain's first major test against atom bombs. The second day of the operation London (which suffered so terribly from bombing during the last world war) "saved" by the defensive air fleet, though several midland and coastal cities suffered "extensive damage." The official referees withheld comment on this, but the British defensive forces were jubilant.

These two operations are being carried out without blare of trumpet, although they comprise a historic event. There is no comment from the governments concerned as to the meaning. The event is left to speak for itself, and broadly it does. However, we shouldn't dismiss it lightly.

The exercises seem to be calculated to serve two important purposes: (1) they afford striking advertisement of the determination of the western democracies to provide invaluable defensive stand together defensively; (2) they provide invaluable defensive experience.

The operations presumably are in part a gesture toward Moscow. Their international aspect serves notice that the Atlantic pact is more than a piece of paper. Russia of course expects the pact to be put into operation and implemented, but there are times when action speaks louder than words, and this is one of them.

Indeed, the Muscovites understand action better than words. The current action goes added emphasis from the fact that it is being carried out by four important members of the Atlantic treaty.

But the propaganda value of the exercises doesn't stop with Russia. They provide practical evidence to the harassed nations of Western Europe that the Atlantic alliance means what it says. That is important, because these countries would be sitting right under the big guns if another war should come.

Right here it should be said that these exercises don't mean the Western democracies expect another world conflict. It does mean that they recognize the possibility of an upheaval and intend to be prepared for contingencies.

From the military standpoint, the air and naval exercises are ordinary horse sense. Should there be war (which heaven forbid) Britain would be the main base of the Western Allies. Were England knocked out by a surprise atomic attack at the outset of war, it would be a catastrophe which the Marion, June 29 — (AP) — Three Kentucky men each have been sentenced to seven years in prison on pleas of guilty to charges of burglary.

Court officials said the men, Woodrow W. Arnold, 32; Artell Rupert Cornwell, 27, and Julius Bertrand Wyatt, 33, all of Paducah, admitted entering the Holland Implement Co. of West Memphis, June 4.

The men were also accused of taking part in the $3,500 robbery of the A. J. Batz Equipment Co., of Pocatamos, June 2.

Truman Aide Says Baruch Is Badly Informed

Washington, June 29 — (AP) — The White House said today that Bernard M. Baruch was "badly informed" in his claim that the administration is taking a "needless gamble with our national security."

An aide to President Truman told a news conference the chief executive will have something to say about Baruch when he sees the press tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. CST.

This aide, who would not permit use of his name, took particular exception to Baruch's assertion in a speech to the industrial war college here yesterday that the national security resources board had been prevented from acting on a complete wartime mobilization plan.

Baruch told a reporter he referred to a plan drafted by the resources board some months ago but later turned down by the President despite its approval by seven cabinet officers.

The White House aide said no such plan was presented to the President or approved by the resources board.

Baruch has not been seen around the White House for months. His last task as an adviser to Mr. Truman was on the United Nations atomic energy question.

Second Victim of Leukemia in Birmingham

Birmingham, Ala., June 29 — (UP) — Eight-year-old Billy Anderson, son of Sosa, Miss., whose sister died a week ago of Leukemia, was in Jefferson Hillman hospital here today for treatment of the same disease.

Billy was brought here yesterday by his father, Glaze Anderson, who earlier had said he was taking the boy to a New Orleans clinic. The reason for the change in plans was not known.

After Billy's sister, five-year-old Betty Joyce, died of Leukemia, Billy said he didn't want to go to New Orleans again. "It didn't do my sister any good and it won't me either," he said.

Both children were treated in New Orleans before Betty Joyce died. At the time Betty Joyce died, doctors said Billy's condition was even farther advanced than the girl's.

News man Tells About 'Bama Floggings

Washington, June 29 — (AP) — A Birmingham newspaperman told a congressional committee today his story of flogging administered three Alabama women by a hooded gang of 150 night riders.

The witness, Clark Stallworth, was cross-examined about an investigation he made. He is a 23-year old reporter for the Birmingham Post.

Stallworth was called before a civil rights subcommittee of the house judiciary committee conducting hearings on new federal civil rights legislation.

He identified the women as Mrs. Irene Burton, 39, of Dora, Ala., and her two daughters, Billie Fay, 18, and Sally, 16.

He said they told him they were beaten in a wooded spot about four miles from Dora on the night of June 3 by a crowd of 150 men wearing white hoods. Stallworth said he was told the mother and younger daughter were lashed with a six-foot leather belt and threatened with hanging. The same treatment was accorded two of three men, who were with the women, Stallworth testified.

Asked by Chairman Byrum (D-NY) if the women could identify any of the floggers, Stallworth said they gave the name of one as "Oscar Lee Colvert."

Rep. Celler (D-NY) asked if any reason or motive was given for the beatings.

"One of the girls told me they had been dating the men and the klan — or whoever did the beatings — didn't like it," Stallworth replied.

The women claimed the night riders wore the insignia of the Klux Klan on their robes, Stallworth said.

State Police Hopeful for Sane July 4

Be Alive on the Fifth! Holiday motorists were offered that advice today by the Arkansas State Police as the Fourth of July celebration approaches.

Unless everyone takes that advice to heart and uses extra caution to reverse the usual high holiday accident toll, many persons starting to celebrate the Fourth of July will not live to see the day out, according to Director of State Police Herman E. Lindsey.

"Year after year the Independence Day celebration stands out as the number one accident killer during the summer," he said. "This year promises to run true to form, unless the celebrants themselves resolve to do something about it."

"The three-day holiday and the continuing upward trend in vehicle injuries may combine into a big mangle and a huge death and injury toll. They spell out the challenge that confronts us."

Director Lindsey pointed out the danger of speed as one of the special perils of the holiday celebration. He said that speed contributes to one out of three fatal traffic accidents.

"Speeders Lose!" is the slogan of a month-long program sponsored by the Arkansas State Police as the July theme, "Operation Safety," a continuing traffic safety education program directed throughout the country by the National Safety Council.

The fourth of July holiday celebration can be the trail blazer for a reduction in the entire month's traffic toll, if motorists put their minds to it," said Director Lindsey. "And the safety trails blazed during this one month can lead to a reduced toll for the entire year, if we keep up the good work during the remaining vacation months of heavier motoring."

He offered the following tips to holiday drivers:
Begin your trip a little earlier so you won't be tempted to speed. Remember that speeders lose. Take it easy on the Fourth and be alive on the Fifth.

1. Don't drink if you drive, and don't drink if you drink. 2. Don't cut in and out of heavy traffic. Stay in line until passing is safe. 3. Drive as if your life depended on it — because it does. And other lives often depend on you, too.

CLIPPED ANGEL
By Clive Grieron Cornish
Copyright, 1949, NEA SERVICE, INC.

The Story: Mike McTale, a mining engineer, is working for beautiful, high-spirited Cory Farrell, in spite of Mike's ideas about women. He says that Cory believes Cory's mine, the Dan Angel, is playing out, but he takes samples and ships them to San Francisco for a secret assay. However, one of the lots, he finds, was tampered with, and the figures are returned he finds that the untampered lot shows a much higher figure than the other — approximately $16 per ton, compared with $5 a ton. Mike tells Cory that the lot has been tampered with, and that somebody had tampered with the lot that showed only a $5 per ton assay.

After I told Cory Parnell about the knots of my sample bags being tampered with, it took a minute for the thing to hit her. She turned white around the lips.

"I lit a cigarette," she means, that Riggs is crooked. Second, it's obvious that Riggs can't be the only one — the higher-ups must be in on it. And third, well, it sounds fantastic but what I said was fantastic has actually been happening. Somebody's been pinching most of your high-grade ore."

"But — but why, Mike?" "I did a bit of mental arithmetic. For a gross of around $2000 a day, each and every day, that's why."

She thought about it for while. "I don't see how it's possible — I mean, how could anybody steal that much?"

"Search me, but it's being done," Mike said. "I don't — What am I going to do?"

I put out my cigarette. "That's up to you — but I know what I'd do. I'd fire everyone, from top to bottom, and start over again."

"You mean everybody except Archie and Uncle Jake and the men who worked for Dad and these I know are all right?"

I lost my patience. "For heaven's sake, Cory, can't you see? This means Archie and Uncle Jake are the ones. They're in on it. You can't lift 20 tons of high-grade ore a day and not have the men know about it. They've been robbing you right and left."

"I can't believe it," she said flatly.

I took a deep breath. "Look — Then I let it out. What was the use of arguing?"

"Maybe it's one of the shift bosses," she said. "After all, if you don't know how it's being done, maybe Archie and Uncle Jake and lots of other people don't know either."

She had me there. Every word she said was the truth. I didn't know how it was being done, although even then an idea was drifting around in the back of my head. But she had been on the scene, running things since Parnell died, and she didn't know.

It was possible that Trask was being fooled to the extent of 20 tons of high-grade ore a day, in anybody's mine it would be sloppy supervision, but such was not completely unheard of. It could happen.

I nodded as these thoughts ran through my mind. "All right," I said, "we'll suppose that Trask doesn't know about it. We'll suppose that Uncle Jake is dumb, too. The point is, if they don't know, about it, they ought to find out, and that's reason enough for firing them."

"Uncle Jake's been with us ever since the mine started, and —" "— and Archie's been with the company for 10 years," I finished for her, "and they love you like a sister."

She laughed. "Well, not exactly," she said. "Because both of them have proposed to me at different times."

It took me a minute to digest this, and then an angle struck me. "Pardon my curiosity, but when these proposals took place, did you turn them down with that kindness and graciousness which is so noticeably a part of you?"

She had the grace to blush. "Well, if you must know, I told Archie not to be a fool, and when Uncle Jake proposed I was so surprised I laughed right out loud."

I looked at the lovely creature beside me and wondered if she knew how cruel she had been. I hoped not, because, for better or worse, I was in love with her. "That wasn't a very nice thing

DOROTHY DIX Too Much Sacrifice

Dear Miss Dix: I am in my early 20s. Have been at work for four years. Pay board at home and the house and for every member of the family, yet no matter how am, how I feel, I am in a bad mood.

The old parable of the prodigal son is the truest story ever told. Practically no parents appreciate their good children who worked and slave for them and do their duty as children. Always fathers' and mothers' hearts go out to the prodigal, the selfish prodigal who takes the best of everything and who never even gives thought to the heartaches that he or she is causing father and mother.

I do not think that any girl who works and who pays her board should be expected to do any more housework than any other boarder would.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am married to the best man on earth and I worship him. When I was just a young girl about 16 years of age I had a sweetheart with whom I acted indiscreetly. Since I have become a mother I worry a great deal over that. I have never done anything else in my life to regret. I have been a model wife and mother, but my conscience torments me so that I hate myself. What shall I do? Shall I tell my husband or not?

X. Y. M.
Answer: Certainly not. Don't buy your own ease of mind by forever destroying the peace of mind of the man you love. He has been good and kind to you. Show your appreciation of that by locking your secret in your heart and never speaking of it. Never think of it. You have earned your right to happiness. Take it. And make up to your husband for the thing he does not know and should never know by your tenderness and goodness to him.

Whatever wrong you did in your youth you have atoned for by your repentance. Forget it. Never speak of it. Never think of it. You have earned your right to happiness. Take it. And make up to your husband for the thing he does not know and should never know by your tenderness and goodness to him.

There is nothing so cowardly as confession. There is nothing so craven as for a woman to lay the burden of her sin on the shoulders of an innocent man and wreck his happiness by telling him something in her past that will forever disillusion him and kill his faith in her.

Separation is Salvation
We perceive that not all parents and children are congenial, for many an old hen hatches out a swan and pecks the very life out of it trying to keep it out of the water for which nature destined it. Also, many brothers and sisters are so temperamentally different that they fight by instinct like cats and dogs.

Separation is Salvation
We perceive that not all parents and children are congenial, for many an old hen hatches out a swan and pecks the very life out of it trying to keep it out of the water for which nature destined it. Also, many brothers and sisters are so temperamentally different that they fight by instinct like cats and dogs.

'Too Late for Tears' to Play at Saenger

The famed Pasadena Playhouse can be credited with another contribution to the movies in the person of handsome Don DeFore, who currently is co-starring with blonde Elizabeth Scott and tough man Dan Duryea in "Too Late For Tears."

A Hunt Stromberg drama which opens next Sunday at the Saenger Theatre through United Artists release.

DeFore was a member of the same class at the Playhouse as Robert Preston, Wayne Morris, Dana Andrews, and Victor Mature, all of whom have attained screen stardom since graduating in 1937. DeFore, however, did not graduate. Four months before graduation, he and four other class members produced a show of their own, which they put on at a Hollywood playhouse. It caught the attention of Oscar Hammerstein, who moved the show intact to Broadway where it ran long enough to pay for itself.

Soon afterwards DeFore got a bid from Warner Brothers to appear in their film, "The Male Animal." He has remained in Hollywood ever since.

Don was born in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on August 25, 1917.

Baptist Group Adopts a Record Budget

Little Rock, June 29 (AP). — The executive board of the Arkansas Baptist Convention has adopted a record budget for 1949-1950.

Dear Miss Dix: What do you think of a man who always criticizes his wife's bridge playing every time he becomes her partner at a party and shows his anger if she makes what he considers a bad play, thus humiliating his wife and embarrassing the other people?

Answer: Why, I'd say he was just a regular husband of the common or garden variety. They all do it. Any man who didn't criticize his wife's bridge would probably have a monomaniacal obsession by popular subscription and wives would make a holy pilgrimage to gaze upon it.

State Baptist convention has adopted a record operating budget of $755,000.
The board, meeting here yesterday, also adopted a $220,000 budget for capital outlays, to which funds will be applied after the operating total has been met.
Subject to ratification by the state convention, the board authorized Arkansas Baptist hospital to borrow $500,000 for construction of an office building adjoining the hospital here.

The board adopted a resolution approving a house bill to provide federal aid to public schools, but opposing a senate version which would extend the proposed aid to parochial schools also.

Fair Enough

New York, June 28 — The trial of Alger Hiss must be viewed as a coney of suspicion by citizens who have studied the machinations of the Harvard law school cabal and the intrigues of Eleanor Roosevelt. During the trial Mrs. Roosevelt felt emboldened to say in the Chambers, "I am not a perjurer in some trivial points, was an incredible witness for the prosecution. Therefore, she moved, in effect, that the case be thrown out.

This condemnation seemed inconsistent coming from a woman who had falsely stated that she had never had an automobile accident when, in fact, she had had three smashups. Had she told the truth about these three wrecks, the hearing might reasonably have concluded that she was unfit to drive and this would have been a serious inconvenience to her.

Each person may make his own test in this. It is this. Can you forget three serious automobile accidents in which you had participated as a driver? And would you regard a driver with a record of four serious accidents as a safe risk on the road?

Although of course there is no charge of perjury against Mrs. Roosevelt in the Hiss case, she is a co-defendant in a figurative sense because Hiss is a protégé of Felix Frankfurter, who has been on the bench behind the throne ever since the new deal began. Hiss, a member of their crowd, their clique, Frankfurter is an old, intimate partner in politics, not always in the realm of Niles, the Boston political fixer who was planted in the White House in the role of a selfless secretary with a passion for anonymity early in the Roosevelt reign. A brother of Niles, who was variously as Elias and Elliott Niles or Nye, was commissioned a captain in the army early in the war and, as recently as last winter, was still safe and comfortable in the Pentagon. There he had spent the war. Now he had risen to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Frankfurter, David Niles and Harold Laski, of London, who has been openly called an apologist for Communism, have been close associates for many years. Niles is hardly to be classed with Frankfurter and Laski in the intellectual sense. But little is known about him. Were he an outspoken fellow he might be relegated to unimportant status. But, being quiet, almost to the extent of furtiveness and yet hanging on tenaciously long after Roosevelt, Niles arouses questions. Whom does he represent in the White House? What does he do? Is Truman afraid to fire him?

The judge in the Hiss case is Samuel H. Kaufman, a Tammany politician who was counsel for the notorious Boss Tweed, a draft-dodger and stock manipulator, George Rubinstein. Rubinstein finally went to prison as the most disgraceful sneaker and ingrate of the American war, but here he was laid by the heels he had repeatedly been formally invited to the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt. He had pulled in the Roosevelt administration and his household. He enlisted as a friendly consideration of Brian McMahon, the demagogue senator from Connecticut, and a deportment order was reversed by the board of immigration appeals. This is the same bureaucratic rear the squad which saved Harry Bridges after the decision to deport him had been sustained by the district and appellate courts.

The association of the bar of New York City found so little to recommend Judge Kaufman for his role on the district bench that it refused to recommend his confirmation. And the federal bar association of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut rescinded an earlier endorsement for the same reason. The senate judiciary committee refused to approve his appointment, a device used for the appointment of marshals, post-ally and the like but not to impose on the courts judges who can't pass inspection. After Truman was re-elected and got his own congress, he sent Kaufman's name through again and this time the Democrats in the senate confirmed him.

By whose process it fell out that the Hiss case came before Kaufman I do not know but will inquire. It was postponed several times by the court's consideration of a suspension of a more considerable judge. A suspicion of partiality could arise from the fact that the whole Frankfurter cult and the Roosevelt myth are on trial beginning with this political protégé of the regime.

Before the Thomas committee on un-American activities, Hiss pleaded that he be not required to name Frankfurter as the man who brought him into the government. He was willing to indict Jerome Frank, now a judge of the circuit court of appeals, sitting in the same court house downtown in New York, where this trial goes on. Frank was then general counsel for the agricultural adjustment administration, a hotbed of communism and a mass of traitorism. It was crawling with graduates of Harvard law and late students of Frankfurter's sly counsel and sidling thought. Hiss didn't mind saying that Frank was his sponsor. But he seemed to think it would be Frankfurter in the same court. At last, in anguish, he was forced to admit that Frankfurter induced him into the government for the career which led to charges of betrayal of his country to a Soviet spy. Incidentally, although the statute of limitations may have run on some of the acts of betrayal alleged against him, Hiss need not avail himself of this immunity. If he really wants to clear his name on the evidence rather than by a technicality, he can waive the statute and face trial.

A last, Frankfurter and Stanley Reed, another justice of the supreme court, were presented as character witnesses for Hiss. They came on their own initiative, without subpoena. They are officers of the highest court in the land and officers of the government which the Communists have undertaken to destroy. Judge Kaufman was cordial to them far beyond the requirements of courtesy. Frankfurter here was no better than any other citizen. He was the patron of the man on trial. Yet, when Thomas F. Murphy, the prosecuting attorney, tried to question him about others whom he had planned to abuse about the mysterious "invisible government" of the Harvard law school, anti-Communist, anti-American cult, Judge Kaufman shut him off.

Murphy had a right to discredit, if he could, the character of Hiss's character witnesses. When Frankfurter went there he put his own character up for question for the first time since he was nominated for the supreme court and brought down to earth the present secretary of state, to the senate hearings as his mouthpiece. It was the only nominee in the history of the supreme court who needed a lawyer before the senate. Frankfurter before the senate and the facts that were known about him then were trivial as compared with the evidence that has come to light since. Yet Kaufman entered the play so that Frankfurter's endorsement of Hiss was not a mere technicality. Frankfurter's own character could be taken for granted.

There seems to be an assumption that Frankfurter and Reed will disqualify themselves if the Hiss case comes before them on appeal. But that is based on a mere tradition of honor and not a rule. In its present corrupt condition, our justice system is not only abused another for failure to disqualify himself, in similar circumstances, Douglas openly courts the CIO, a political body which often has interests before the bar. And in a previous case Frankfurter wrote the majority decision upholding the Norris-LaGuardia act which he, himself, had written.

He has been a sordid spectacle from the standpoint of Americans who reject their innocent faith in the motto carved across the facade of the supreme court: "Equal justice under law."

Volts Open Crucial Series Tonight With Barons

By The Associated Press
The Nashville Vols open a crucial series tonight with the league-leading Birmingham Barons to determine which club will be host in the Southern association on all-star game.

Trailing the loop leaders by one and one-half games, most of the pressure will be on the Vols if they want to supplant the Barons in first place by July Fourth.

The club leading in the standings on that day automatically becomes the all-star host.

The Barons had a rest last night. Rain caused postponement of their scheduled game with the Little Rock Travelers.

Don't Bet on Outcome of Labor Act

By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, June 29 — (AP) — Don't bet on what's going to happen in the Taft-Hartley labor act in congress.

That's because things are so scrambled there, where the Democrats are supposed to be in control because they have a majority.

It's a riotous kind of control, as this will show. For a minute, just review a little history so that what's happening will be clear.

In 1935, when the Democrats had a majority in congress and were really able to run the show, they passed the Wagner labor act.

(The father of it was Robert F. Wagner, New York Democrat who resigned from the senate yesterday after 22 years there.)

The Wagner act compelled bosses to bargain with union representatives. It put no restrictions on a union.

Employers, who looked on this as a one-sided law, never got used to it. But it stayed on the books until 1947.

In that year the Republicans got control of congress with a majority and promptly tackled the Wagner act.

They replaced it with the Taft-Hartley act. Now it was the turn of the unions to scream because: While T-H put a few more restrictions on employers it put more restrictions on unions than they ever had before in their history.

That was one of the big talking points for President Truman and his Democrats in last fall's election.

They promised, backed by labor, that if they won control of congress they'd wipe out T-H and restore the old Wagner act. They won.

So they started this 81st congress in January with a majority, and more promises of knocking T-H into the blenders.

Hearings on a new labor bill went on for months. Finally the house where the Democrats have a majority, called it up for action.

But the Democrats — particularly the Southern Democrats — were not all willing to tag along with Mr. Truman's campaign promises.

This was duck soup for the Republicans who wanted to keep T-H, or as much of it as they could.

So the Truman Democrats were unable to run through the bill. The bill was sent back to the house labor committee for further study. This prevented a final vote on the bill.

And most times when a bill is called up on the floor, as this was, and then goes back to committee, that just about kills it for the rest of the year.

At last, a couple of weeks ago, the senate, where the Democrats also have a majority, called up the labor bill for action.

The Truman Democrats haven't

Complete Inside Story of U. S. Dealings With China Should Be a Best Seller

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Secretary of State Acheson says the complete inside story of American relations with China may be told soon. It should be a best seller.

This statement was more or less coincident with two striking developments in the U. S. senate. In one case several senators took the floor to criticize the American policy toward Nationalist China. In the other, 21 senators (15 Republicans and 6 Democrats) sent President Truman a letter asking for assurances that the United States would not recognize the Communist regime but would continue to support the Nationalist government.

Observers figure that this senatorial reaction may speed publication of the report. However, it's clear that any detailed discussion of the American government's feelings about China might be a decidedly delicate matter. After all, it will be passing strange if the state department hasn't had some significant criticisms to make of Chinese Nationalist inefficiency. That wouldn't be of much comfort or aid to a government fighting for its life against communism.

Naturally the paramount questions involved are those raised in the senatorial letter—whether America shall continue to support the Nationalist government and whether she shall refuse to recognize a Communist government. Satisfactory answers call for much more detail than is implied in the general phrasing of the questions.

Thus far Washington has taken the general attitude that it wouldn't recognize any Communist regime so long as a responsible Nationalist government existed. The U. S. A. wasn't going to do anything to contribute to the Nationalist collapse.

Well and good, but what constitutes a "responsible government"? What responsibilities must it meet in order to classify? How much of the country must the Nationalist control to be "responsible"? At what stage of control would the Communists become "responsible"?

Then of course there arises the red-hot question of whether the United States, in conflict with communism the world over, would recognize a Chinese Communist government at all.

Those queries need official answer, since anything short of that is pure speculation. In the past the international practice frequently has been to grant recognition to a government when it was a going concern—really in control of the territory it represented. Such recognition didn't in itself mean an endorsement of the government or an expression of approval. It merely meant that the government was in fact a going concern, that is, it was a "de facto" government.

Actually in the past many governments have been given such recognition when they didn't meet with the full approval of the granters. Why then the recognition? Because envoys couldn't be sent to the new governments without recognition, and the country withholding recognition would thus be handicapped in securing vital information.

Of course the question of recognition in China hasn't yet arisen. When it does one would expect that the big Western powers—America, Britain and France—would act in unison. And there are

U. S. Income to Hit New Five-Year Low

By CHARLES MELONY

Washington, June 29—(AP)—The government's income, dragged down by the 1948 income tax cut and the recent economic downturn, will hit a five-year low for the 12-month period ending tomorrow.

When returns are in for the 1949 fiscal year, revenue receipts will fall about a billion dollars—or a little more—below the $39,580,000,000 forecast by the administration last January, government experts said today.

Not since fiscal 1944 has the government's income dropped below $40,000,000,000, and not since the war ended has an administration forecasted a decline in the nation's economy.

A drop in collection of personal income taxes, resulting from the tax cut voted in the spring of 1948, was the chief cause of the government's income decline.

Another factor was worker layoffs in the recently weakened taxes. It appeared withholding receipts would fall about five per cent labor market, reflected in decreasing receipts from withholding under administration estimates, amounting for $500,000,000—about half the difference between the estimated income and actual income.

Compared with fiscal 1948, when higher tax rates were in effect most of the year, current withholding rates appeared to be off about $1,500,000,000.

Against this, the excise or sales taxes collected by the federal government were running slightly above last year—the difference is about $50,000,000—and only moderately—about $100,000,000—below the January estimate.

many observers who won't find it surprising if they act on a "practical basis" that is, grant recognition to a Communist regime if it is a going concern in control of a large part of the country. And if the Nationalist government at the same time is a going concern in another party, China, why its recognition would be continued.

However, that's speculation on any part, and has no official backing.

There is a feeling in some well informed quarters that Russia won't be able to supply the victorious Chinese Communists with necessities. This presumably would force the Reds to turn to the Western world, thereby creating a contact which might color their ideological conduct.

Perhaps that's a valid argument. Maybe it's just a bit of salve for the conscience in recognizing a regime which in theory at least is a mortal enemy.

Waitkus Assailant Definitely Has Split Personality

Chicago, June 28—(AP)—Ruth Steinhausen, who shot and wounded Eddie Waitkus, star Philadelphia Phillies ball player, is suffering from a split personality, says Edward T. Breen, assistant state's attorney.

The 19-year-old typist, who had a crush on Waitkus, is "commitment to a mental hospital," Breen said after he read a report on her condition by Dr. William H. Haines, head of the Cook county behavior clinic.

Miss Steinhausen is to be taken before a grand jury and if indicted, Breen said, the state will seek a sanity hearing before a jury. She is to have a preliminary hearing in federal court Tuesday on a charge of assault with intent to murder.

Waitkus, 29, was shot June 14 after Miss Steinhausen lured the Phillies first baseman to her hotel room by saying she had something "important" to tell him.

Priest Says Disturbance Was Spiritual

By PAUL SIX

United Press Staff Correspondent

Lively Groc, Ill., June 28—(UP)—A Roman Catholic priest said today that "disturbance" at a ramshackle farm home here apparently were "spirit manifestations."

But the Rev. Edward Dahmus, theologian and parish priest of nearby St. Libory, said details of his investigation into the weird occurrences at the home of farmer Tony Greden would be kept secret for the time being.

Dahmus was assigned by Bishop Albert Zuroweste of Belleville to investigate the case officially for the Catholic church.

"The manifestations that have been published so far have been insignificant," Dahmus said. "At this time we have no physical explanation for them."

Another priest, also engaged in the inquiry, said the occurrences were "preternatural but we don't know yet if the agent is benign or diabolical."

The reported manifestations have taken the form of "spirit writing," loud and ghostly rappings, and the throwing of objects about the rooms of the five-room frame farmhouse.

Dahmus said he believed the occurrences, which began on May 1, ended about a week ago. Before that, he said, they took place on every night but June 5, Pentecost Sunday, which celebrates the descent of the holy spirit to earth after Easter.

The Greden home is in a lonely section, standing amidst Greden's 100 or so acres of land. The house is equipped with electricity but has no modern plumbing. The paint is peeling off its walls, but the land is rich and Greden is considered moderately well-fixed financially.

The nearest neighbor lives in another farmhouse 300 yards away.

The community is largely Catholic. Greden's 11-year-old son, Jerome, is one of seven sons and three daughters. Noises have been heard in his room and objects thrown about.

Cotton Growers Need Clear and Dry Weather
Little Rock, June 29 (AP)—Growers need a period of clear dry weather to enable them to clean out grass and weeds from cotton fields, the crop reporting service said in its weekly bulletin today.

"Some of the fields are in such bad condition that they will not be worked out," the report said, but added that "most of the early planted cotton, however, is fairly clean and the crop as a whole is making satisfactory growth."

"Blooms are beginning to appear throughout the cotton area; small bolls are reported in some southern areas. A heavy early season infestation of boll weevils is damaging a large number of squares, and is reported to be the worst in years in some localities."
